This collection of tunes was mostly written while on the road, a place that often seems to give me the urge to compose. Why that is I can only guess, but I have a feeling that it's less about seeing something new and more about seeing something old (my life, my relationships) at a distance, from a different angle. Some of these songs are about a specific place or event, others reflect a state of mind or nostalgia for something absent or past or distant. This music wasn't written with these particular musicians in mind, more a type of musician. However as soon as we had played a gig I knew that I wanted to record with this group.
